

TOOK IT BACK.

the people. He has also supplemented his income by other literary productions and by lecturing from time to time. He might have stated this much in all fairness but he did not.

In this connection the personal prosperity of Mr. Jones in his Hopkinsville visits becomes as live an issue as Col. Bryan's taxes. In 1893 he was reported to have been paid about $2,300, in 1894 $1,300 ($10 of which he gave to the Tabernacle fund.) in 1897 $700 and this time $500. It seems his "prosperity" in Hopkinsville is decreasing in about the same ratio that Col. Bryan's taxes are increasing, so one proposition is a fair offset to the other.

But this matter was only taken up at this time to give Mr. Jones the benefit of his correction. When he comes back again we hope he will not have to be called down on any of his statements. It must be said to his credit that his sermons were the best he has ever preached here. Many of them, after the first two days, were entirely free from sensational features. A little plain talk sometimes has a beneficial effect on even great men like Mr. Jones.

RANGE EXPLODES.

And Young Lady Hurt by a Piece of Iron.

While a fire was being kindled in a range at Mr. J. B. Fisher's Wednesday morning the stove exploded, tearing away the ceiling and damaging the furniture considerably. Miss Dickinson, Mrs. Fisher's sister, was struck on the head by a stove cap, and badly bruised. It seems that all the water had not been drawn off from the range the night before and when it began to heat up the explosion occurred.

The South Leads.

The six first and highest members of the engineering department of the first class at Annapolis are Southern men. The names as reported, are in the order of their standing:

- 1—J. N. Bissett, Kentucky.
- 2—John T. Beckner, Kentucky.
- 3—Verrett J. Sadler, Kentucky.

4—William S. Miller, Texas.

5—Herbert H. Evans, Mississippi.

6—Farmer Morrison, Arkansas.

It must be a source of pride to the people of the south to see their young men taking the front rank wherever they come in competition with others. Every development of surprising or romantic incident which took place during the late Spanish-American war brought to the front some Southern boy in whose veins ran the invincible blood of South Carolina, of Alabama, of Georgia, of North Carolina, and of other States. Whatever the cause, it is somewhat singular that the spirit of dash should be found in Southern young men which brings them to the front and gives them prominence. We have reached a period when our young men are being heard from in other fields than those of the army and navy. The same qualifications which make great soldiers and gallant sailors cannot fail to make enterprising merchants and successful manufacturers. The showing is a good one, and should spur the people of this section of the Union to lose no time in seizing all the great opportunities which are offering for advancement.—Atlanta Constitution.
